Are you sick of being broke? Do you want to finally save up a few bucks? Has debt created enough stress for you?

Successful personal finance blogger Martin Dasko shares his advice on achieving financial freedom in your 20s without missing a party. Financial freedom ranges from paying off $48k of debt (like Jacquelyn did) to quitting your job all way to planning your first vacation in ten years. Next Round's On Me is the story of how Martin navigated his way through the confusing world of personal finance while being a young punk who enjoys vodka.

This book is a practical guide to helping you set yourself up for financial success. I don't want you to hit 30 and be broke. Life's too short to be a broke joke. I want you to live without crippling stress.

Martin shares his exact tips, tricks, and methods that have helped him buy a rental property as a teenager, start a business, save money without ever thinking about it, travel the world guilt-free, and get ahead of his friends.

All of the stories have been applied by Martin and real readers of Studenomics. You'll see what I did to build my credit, help readers pay off massive debt, and get the most out of life.
