Seeking to expand the transformative aspect of the field of conflict resolution, the contributors to this volume have focused on gathering scholarship from under-represented voices and viewpoints in the field, the emerging discipline. Most mainstream conflict resolution seems to look either at interpersonal conflict or international conflict without much focus on the widely differing individuals and social structures involved. This set of peer-reviewed essays adds significant findings to those gaps in the literature. The authors and editors are, perhaps not coincidentally, mostly women and people of color, whose voices are often absent from such collections.
